The liability of water to spoil by long keeping in close vessels, is by no means a criterion of its disqualification for the ordinary purposes of life, as is often imagined; it merely proves the presence of organic matter. To acquire a knowledge of the general nature of water does not require much address; it is only necessary to add to the water we wish to examine certain chemical re-agents, or tests, and, from the phenomena which they produce, a sufficient notion may be formed of the general constitution of the water. Thus, if tincture or solution of soap in spirits of wine, dropped into water, produces immediately a white curdy precipitate, the water abounds in earthy salts, which are chiefly sulphate and super-carbonate of lime, and sometimes magnesian salts. Such waters are unfit for boiling peas, and all kinds of leguminous...
