Other experiments with 100 volume fraction APS yielded 2 - 3 higher amine surface coverage. Previous researchers have determined that 1 - 2 atomic-percent nitrogen constitutes a single monolayer of coverage ( 6 ). Hence, in some sample preparations, two or three monolayers were formed on the surface. 3. 4 Discussion Previous research had indicated that surface amines could be tuned by controlling the volume fraction of amino and methyl terminated silanes ( 7 ). Although the general trend of increasing absorbance or sodium fluorescein, amine content or N C ratio with increasing APS fraction was observed, it was weaker than expected and not reliably reproducible. Several contributing factors such as silane reaction kinetics, solid phase chemistry reactions, and instrument sensitivity limits were probably to blame. For example, it was assumed that the PTMO and...
